Profile

I have been working professionally as a React developer for 5+ years but I have been creating technology for my entire life since early childhood. For the last 3 years I have been working as a Senior React Developer for Cloudwell, a software consultancy specializing in enterprise cloud solutions within the Microsoft ecosystem. There I have gained exceptional professional software experience while working for clients ranging from cyber security defense contractors and multi-billion dollar commercial real estate brokers to federal government agencies. I have led efforts including significant refactors of mission-critical logic, rearchitecting a core automated testing system, and implementing brand new features in both a design and development role. I'm now most interested in building agentic systems with LLMs to develop autonomous tools and workflows that could never have been previously imagined, specifically in education.
